PRESIDENTS MESSAGE:

As I emerged from my tryptophan induced lethargy from our Thanksgiving celebration, it occurred to me that I needed to compose something so that the first page or so of this missive would have something more than that glorious picture of me smiling at you. After having taken the first two weeks of November off with something diagnosed as Flu "A", Ginny and I managed to lead some club members out of the county for lunch (photos and words elsewhere). Come December 8th, some of us are meeting up in Deland for a tour of the Stetson mansion and on the 14th we'll gather at Frigate's in Eau Gallie for our holiday feast. More info on another page.

Another thing that entered my somewhat dented brain pan was: "What do I want for Christmas?" That's simple, whirled peas (world peace, not some oddball British culinary delight). The populace needs to come together and work together like the exquisitely designed electrical systems in our LBCs (well, maybe a tad better than that) so that we are looking forward to ENJOYING life, not just surviving it.

As a lot of you probably know, I celebrated escaping snow shoveling by moving to Florida almost 40 years ago by, almost immediately after arriving, having a myocardial infarction (that's a heart attack). Cripes, you're supposed to be OLDE to have one of those, not a couple of years shy of forty! Well, it took the wind out of my sails for a while until my beautiful lady physician b-slapped me upside of my head and told me that I was going to die if I didn't relax and start enjoying life. "Lighten the #$%& up!" she said (really, those words). Well, it has apparently worked for me, even though my sense of humor can stray a bit. I picked up another bit of advice from a video I saw the other day where Toby Keith asked Clint Eastwood how he started each day. Clint responded that he got out of bed, looked out the window, and didn't let the old man in. I suppose that's what we all are doing by having our toy cars and club friends.

So what DO you get the car guy/gal that has everything? ANOTHER LBC! Sorry, that slipped out. Look through their toolbox and determine what they don't have and buy one or two. How about one of those "Red Dog" sockets I've seen on TV recently, that fits every fastener ever made and removes them effortlessly, even if they rusted into place a half-century ago? Yeah, right! I've had such a tool for ten years and it falls a bit short of the glorious capabilities espoused on the boob tube (haunted fish tank in Brit parlance). How about a nice supply of bandages and "Nu-Skin" for when they try to use what is probably an inappropriate tool on the LBC? OK, I know that screwdrivers are NOT chisels, but ANYTHING can be a hammer!

The best gift? What I receive every year, a gift certificate from The Little British Car Company (the owner is a complimentary member of our club) or another purveyor of parts and supplies for our babies. They come in all sizes, and they always fit!

November 19, 2022 – MGCC-FL Scenic Drive and Lunch

The drive went well, with seven cars: two MGB roadsters, two MGBGTs, one MGCCT, one frog-eye Sprite and the usual Triumph in the lead. After a bit of ad-libbing in southwest Cocoa, the group found its way to beautiful Indian River Drive, where we shared the road with four arrogant bicyclists, who never heed a stop sign, but managed to maintain a 20MPH pace, only five under the speed limit, so no big delay. This did allow us to maintain a good following distance, not our usual polka band accordion thing. When we finally got to a long enough straight segment, the last cyclist waved us by and hurled insults at us for reasons still unknown. No one honked a hooter or flashed a headlamp at them for the entire two or three miles we dutifully maintained a safe following distance. Some people!

We made it to our planned stop at the Haulover Canal manatee viewing area and actually viewed several manatees, while stretching legs. Speaking of legs, only two of the seven drivers were less than six feet tall, proving that Little British Cars are for anyone, not just the vertically challenged like your President. A short time later, we arrived at Goodrich's Oyster House and Restaurant. When your esteemed leader made the reservation, the temperature was in the mid to high eighties. On the day of -----well, not so toasty, so the choice of outdoor dining was not so appropriate, but we survived. As far as is known, everyone made it home safely. The weather cooperated beautifully, if a tad chilly. Unlike up nawth, THIS is our driving season!

Along for the ride were Brian and Ginny Mitchell, Norm and Pat Ridgely, Ed and Pam Price, Frank and Helen Kingston, Roger and Edith Lowery, and Doug and Linda Rothwell with friends Bob and Pat Moore. The Rothwells and Moores drove about 80 miles to get to our rally point and ended up closer to home! Something happened to the primary photographer's device and pictures of the Prices and Moores were not retained in its memory (nuts). Hopefully fearless leader was not the only one taking pictures. Looking forward to the next outing.

MG CYBERSTER EV ROADSTER CONFIRMED FOR APRIL 2023 REVEAL

MG is on track to unveil its 'Project E' two-seat electric roadster in April next year ahead of first UK deliveries in the first half of 2024, the brand has said.

The sports car, first previewed by the 2021 Cyberster concept and known internally as 'Project E', was due to be unveiled this month at the Guangzhou motor show but has been put back to next year after concerns the November event would be postponed or cancelled due to Covid disruption.

The production car "will be a game-changer in terms of perception of the brand," MG UK commercial director Guy Pigounakis told Autocar at a recent event. The car will be available in either two-wheel drive – most likely rear-wheel drive - or as a "very high-performance" all-wheel-drive dual-motor version.

The car will become a halo model sitting above the rest of MG's line-up. UK executives had to rethink its positioning when the first full-scale prototype of the production car arrived from China in advance of the reveal originally planned for this month. "Right up to when the model was arriving we were looking at it as a natural successor to the MGF. It's completely not. It's in a completely different sector of the market," said Pigounakis, without revealing pricing.

The car was teased in a video posted to social media in August (below) that showed off the roadster's sleek, long-nosed silhouette, electric folding canvas roof, yoke steering wheel, two-tone sports seats and distinctive LED headlights. Other definitive design cues visible at this early stage include a subtle 'ducktail' rear spoiler and a rear lighting design modelled on the Union Jack - a nod to MG's British roots.

Tellingly, MG captioned the video 'return of the legend', which strongly suggests the final production car will resurrect a sporting nameplate from the brand's illustrious past. Earlier this year, the brand trademarked the name 'MG C EV', which references a lesser-known, straight-six-powered version of the brand-defining MGB from the late 1960s. The two-seat electric sports car was previewed as an outlandish concept in 2021, which company bosses said was given the green light for production after receiving more than 5000 expressions of interest from potential buyers.

While the production car's silhouette bears a visual relation to that earlier concept, it's all change elsewhere, with a total redesign bringing the car into line with MG's production models and rendering it compliant with global homologation rules. It sits higher than before, for example; the wheels are smaller and wrapped in chunkier tyres; the headlights are now uncovered; and the gaping front grille panel has been swapped for what looks to be a subtler, decorative item, perhaps housing an array of sensors.

It still looks to be a two-seater but features a folding roof rather than sticking with the concept's open-cockpit arrangement, and the prominent streamliners running from the headrests to the trailing edge of the bootlid are gone.

Despite the car appearing more or less undisguised in these renderings, still little is known about its powertrain, pricing or performance potential.

The concept was said to be based on a bespoke EV architecture, offering a range of 497 miles and a 0-62mph time of less than 3.0sec, and as a spearhead for MG's new youth-focused Cyber brand, the convertible is expected to be priced affordably - potentially even competing with today's entry-level combustion-powered sports cars.

Talking about adding 'Project E' to the MG line-up, Pigounakis previously told Autocar: “The problem with sports cars is that everybody loves them but not many people buy them.” He added, however, that MG’s global volume means it can “afford to invest in sports cars and take a longer-term view on when there will be a return on investment”, adding that having a sports car “will bring us massive PR and marketing benefits”.

The Cyberster will build on the Chinese brand’s recent phenomenal success in the UK: sales grew 66% last year, from 18,415 in 2020 to 30,600.

The MG 4 hatchback, however, arrived first, as the initial offering in a family of EVs based on parent company SAIC's new Modular Scalable Platform, which is likely to also be used by the Cyberster. That paves the way for 167bhp and 201bhp rear-wheel-drive powertrains – in keeping with its affordable sporting brief – but also a 443bhp dual-motor range-topping option.

The MG 4 is available with both 51kWh and 64kWh batteries, but packaging constraints and less strenuous range requirements could see the Cyberster sold with only the smaller of the two. Expect a range figure comfortably north of 200 miles, in any case.

A third new MG to arrive by 2024 hasn't yet been confirmed, but it is likely to be a third SUV, given the continuing consumer demand for high-riding vehicles.
